“FIFA 22 uses a set of core principles of player behaviour to deliver a true-to-life, authentic experience for players,” explains Thomas Tscherter, Creative Director of FIFA. “By capturing and using player movement data, we are able to create an unprecedented level of detail and realism to the way players move.” With a wide range of animations, players now react faster and cover a wider distance than ever before. Players making more complex moves such as dodges, crosses, and shots will now realistically mimic a player’s motion, which is captured directly from the player’s running motion. This data-driven approach was used to develop the tackle system, which now respects when players make hard tackles on mobile players in-game. Players striking players with boots, and not the feet, have also been given a more accurate feel, a crucial change to make sure players can strike targets with great accuracy, such as diving headers and corner kicks. Players can now make more precise and accurate runs into tight spaces on the pitch. Players now possess the ability to pull-back defensive lines, forcing opponents to cover the entire pitch and buy space for players to go into. This has never been done before in FIFA. Players also have access to the run AI of Europe’s most renowned technical schools in the form of an Evolution Kit, giving players access to some of the most sophisticated AI in football. Players have been given individual animations to create a more natural and reactive feel to the game. Pitches have been updated to include the traditional ‘meadow’ or false-nine position, where the goalkeeper plays deeper and closer to the touchline. Ballbacks have been removed to allow for more movement. Players now interact naturally with each other, and you can detect and control plays that have just begun with ‘Miracle Timing,’ a new mechanic that detects high-scoring situations and changes the pace and balance of the game. This enables players to make impactful plays on the game’s most tense moments. Another key addition to the game is Player Impact Engine 2.0, which delivers a more organic ball physics, improved ball touches and the addition of effects when players go into tackles or make interceptions. To drive FIFA’s increased sense of realism, players now carry an Unwritten Narrative, which has been compiled and curated by veteran developers across the studio. Using data
