The first thing that sets this game apart from other 3D indie titles, is the 3D feel of it. The game itself is played in a top down view, and while this is easy enough to get used to, the developers have made sure that the view is actually 3D, with the player moving within a scene. The gameplay mechanics are very much similar to xtremist's game "Excitebike", only with the addition of Roguelite elements. Gameplay: You are responsible for steering your vehicle, which can choose to go left, right, forward, backwards, strafe left and right, forward and backwards, turn to your right or left, and even jump up. You also have a nitro, which you'll use to boost forwards. Your controls are very tight and responsive, keeping the gameplay enjoyable and in a good rhythm. The game also has excellent, clever level design, as the layout is often changed to the right hand side of the screen in order to allow the player to use the jump button, but also because the view has been rotated 90 degrees. The levels are short, so you'll be completing them in under 5 minutes, and they are also accessible from the beginning, which makes them easy to get into. The nitro system is a great addition, as you'll get a limited amount of it per level, but every time you use it, it will refill, so you won't have to wait too long to refill. The Platform: On the PC and the Mac, you can play the game using the Unity3D engine, which makes the game as slick as it can be. But the game is optimized for the iPhone and the iPad, so you can enjoy it on those!9 iPhone AppC Game "Hero Express"

What's new in Hero Express:

is a game with a variety of different elements, all of which have been designed to create a fast and fun experience. You play as a tank commander, complete with a variety of skills and tasks to perform, as well as a story to progress. It's hard to cover everything that Express has to offer, so we've compiled some quick tips to help you jump into the action as quickly as possible! The Tank Commander Our hero is one of the latest tanks to arrive in the war-torn kingdom. With a variety of skills and tactics to deploy, you're not quite the loner that you are in real life. You have two main skills - healing and protection - which you have to choose between when playing in each scenario. You'll also have a morale rating that affects the number of shots you can fire. The higher your morale, the more shots you can fire before needing rest. Your skills also affect morale, as well as your support rating (which affects your reload speed and the amount of ammo that you receive from your allies). You'll only have two skills for each scenario, and you can switch between them at any time. There's a lot to keep track of, but fortunately there are already a number of apps to help you do just that. You'll have a limited number of deployables in battle. Each tank has deployables to deploy, and when they're released they go into play. For example, on your deployment card, you'll have deployables to deploy including Tanks, Artillery and Air Support. You can deploy either Artillery or Air Support, and you can pay that deployable out before doing so. You can also deploy Tanks, too. For convenience, the deployables that you purchase are added to your deployables bar, which is activated when you pop a deployable - but there's no limit to how many you can have. They should now make it that little bit easier to keep track of what deployables you've used already, as well as easily switching between them with the more permanent deployables bar. You can deploy Tanks and Artillery once per scenario, and Air Support once per scenario. This means that if you have five Tanks deployed, those are the only ones you can use. When you deploy Tanks or Artillery, you can choose from Ground, Water and Overhead, meaning that you can deploy them to easily defend, to attack your opponent, or counter their attacks, or even deploy them across a lake to block off the opponent's
