An image forming apparatus is a machine that forms images such as characters and patterns (which may be referred to hereinafter as a "toner image") on paper, film, or the like, using an electrophotographic system, an electrostatic recording system, or the like. As an image forming apparatus, in addition to a device that performs image formation using an electrophotographic system, there is a digital copier or a digital multifunction peripheral that can perform a function of a copier, a facsimile, a scanner, or the like. As a cartridge to be mounted in the image forming apparatus, there is proposed a cartridge that is replaced by user's operation without using any serviceman or repair person. For example, a cartridge as described below is proposed. When the toner amount of a developing unit of an image forming apparatus reaches a predetermined level, a toner container is replaced.
