The app, first announced in 2016 and now in a public beta, updates cars with information provided by OnStar from all 2016 model year cars and communicates to Tesla owners with Tesla vehicles, said Onkar Srinivasan, CEO of Autodata Inc. Autodata is devoted to automotive owners. In addition, the company believes, for the most part, the information will provide a better understanding of their vehicles by customers. Its also believed that the information could provide safer driving on the road. Autodata is a pioneer in providing car data to consumers and automakers. The company has worked with a range of automotive OEMs, non-OEMs and suppliers on delivering multi-faceted in-vehicle services. "We are the only supplier of voice, data, vehicle data and vehicle telemetry," says Onkar Srinivasan, CEO of Autodata Inc. Autodata has emerged as the world leader in the vehicle telemetry industry. Our software solutions enable OEMs, non-OEMs, systems suppliers and aftermarket vendors to deliver more innovative services to customers, Srinivasan says. Therefore, they can provide the dealer their deepest insight into their vehicle and its customers. Keep in mind that it is becoming common to provide new cars and one expert used an example of a driver feeling disconnected from his vehicle. Autodata is the data and the voice could change that. The vehicle telemetry industry does not have a uniform standard for 3G. This means that in order to support the services, you need to connect to OnStar via Wi-Fi to send the data over the 3G network, which only supports about six-hundred Kbps rate. Autodata provides data based on OnStar Data Standard. The OnStar Data Standard or ODAS is a method of communication that is consistent within the manufacturer and is generally accepted by vehicle telemetry equipment suppliers.
